

Don't count your chicken before they hatch game

This game is a game to get your guests at your party to book a party with you. First of all you will need one dozen plastic Easter eggs in six colors. Place different items in the eggs on paper. (See list below or choose your own) and let each of your guests pick an egg (Remember to tell your host not to pick the certain color egg that you placed "you are going to book a party today because your host is having a party). But don't allow them to open them up until everyone picks theirs. Explain to your guests the rules of the game before you hand out the eggs. let them choose if they want to play or not, but don't forget to tell them about the other things in the eggs. Explain to all that by booking a party that they will earn free gifts and most of all they will be helping their host reach their goal for their party.
